DUNAHOO ATTENDS BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP SUMMIT IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

Sandra K. Edwards Dunahoo, of Nesbitt Engineering, Inc., recently attended the Business and Professional Women's Leadership Summit in Washington, D.C. The two day conference provided a forum for approximately 350 professional women from across the country to discuss a range of policy issues with members of the United States Congress, the Administration, and experts in the fields of health care, education, and business. The conference participants were nominated to attend by their members of Congress.

"Bringing together women leaders, policy experts, and our federal officials for an open dialogue on the pressing issues facing our families and communities is critical to moving our nation forward in the 21st century," said Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison (TX), Summit co-sponsor.

A host of leaders from the U.S. Congress joined prominent women to address the Summit, including keynote speaker U.S. Secretary of Labor Elaine L. Chao. U.S. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell (KY) addressed the delegates and welcomed them to the Summit. Other notable speakers included Carly Fiorina, Chairman and CEO of Hewlett-Packard Company (199902005); Meg Whitman, former President and CEO of eBay Inc., and Dr. Mary Evans Sias, President of Kentucky State University;
